writing against the prevailing narrativization of suicide in terms of why it happened whitehead turns instead to the questions of when how and where calling attention to suicide's materiality as well as its materialization by turns provocative and deeply affecting this book brings suicide into conversation with the critical medical humanities extending beyond individual pathology and the medical institution to think about subjective and social perspectives and to open up the various sites scenes and interactions with which suicide is associated suicide is related forward from the point of death rather than taking a retrospective view combining critical and textual analysis with personal reflection based on her own experience of her sister s suicide whitehead examines the days months and years following a death by suicide this pivoting of attention to what happens in the wake of suicide brings to light the often surprising ways in which suicide is woven into the everyday places that we inhabit and in which it is related to all of us albeit with varying degrees of proximity and kinship the past 25 years have seen a major paradigm shift in the field of violence prevention from the assumption that violence is inevitable to the recognition that violence is preventable part of this shift has occurred in thinking about why violence occurs and where intervention points might lie in exploring the occurrence of violence researchers have recognized the tendency for violent acts to cluster to spread from place to place and to mutate from one type to another furthermore violent acts are often preceded or followed by other violent acts in the field of public health such a process has also been seen in the infectious disease model in which an agent or vector initiates a specific biological pathway leading to symptoms of disease and infectivity the agent transmits from individual to individual and levels of the disease in the population above the baseline constitute an epidemic although violence does not have a readily observable biological agent as an initiator it can follow similar epidemiological pathways on april 30 may 1 2012 the institute of medicine iom forum on global violence prevention convened a workshop to explore the contagious nature of violence part of the forum s mandate is to engage in multisectoral multidirectional dialogue that explores crosscutting evidence based approaches to violence prevention and the forum has convened four workshops to this point exploring various elements of violence prevention the workshops are designed to examine such approaches from multiple perspectives and at multiple levels of society in particular the workshop on the contagion of violence focused on exploring the epidemiology of the contagion describing possible processes and mechanisms by which violence is transmitted examining how contextual factors mitigate or exacerbate the issue contagion of violence workshop summary covers the major topics that arose during the 2 day workshop it is organized by important elements of the infectious disease model so as to present the contagion of violence in a larger context and in a more compelling and comprehensive way
