Australian Books and Authors in the American Marketplace 1840s 1940s explores how Australian writers and their works were present in the United States before the mid twentieth century to a much greater degree than previously acknowledged drawing on fresh archival research and combining the approaches of literary criticism print culture studies and book history David Carter and Roger Osborne demonstrate that Australian writing was transnational long before the contemporary period in mapping Australian literature's connections to British and US markets their research challenges established understandings of national imperial and world literatures Carter and

osborne examine how australian authors editors and publishers engaged productively with their american counterparts and how american readers and reviewers responded to australian works they consider the role played by british publishers and agents in taking australian writing to america and how the international circulation of new literary genres created new opportunities for novelists to move between markets some of these writers such as christina stead and patrick white remain household names others who once enjoyed international fame such as dale collins and alice grant rosman have been largely forgotten the story of their books in america reveals how culture commerce and copyright law interacted to create both opportunities and obstacles for australian writers eleanor dark 1901-85 is one of australia's most innovative 20th century writers her extensive oeuvre includes ten novels published from the early 1930s to the late 1950s and represents a significant engagement with global modernity from a unique position within settler culture yet dark's contribution to 20th century literature has been undervalued in the fields of both Australian literary studies and world literature although two biographies have been written about her life there has been no book-length critical study of her writing published since 1976 Middlebrow Modernism counters this neglect by providing the first full-length critical survey of Eleanor Dark's writing to be published in over four decades focusing on the fiction that Dark produced during the interwar years and reading this in the context of her larger body of work this book positions Dark's writing as important to the study of Australian literature and global modernism Melinda Cooper argues that Dark's fiction exhibits a distinctive aesthetic of middlebrow modernism which blends attributes of literary modernism with popular fiction it seeks to mediate and reconcile apparent binaries modernism and mass culture liberal humanism and experimental aesthetics settler society and international modernity the term middlebrow modernism also captures the way Dark negotiated cosmopolitan commitments with more place-based attachments to nation and local community within the mid-20th century middlebrow modernism posits that Dark's fiction and the broader phenomenon of Australian modernism offer essential case studies for larger debates operating within global modernist and world literature studies providing perspectives these fields might otherwise miss
