Recursive Macroeconomic Theory 2017-03-06 abstract facing runaway inflation and budget discipline problems in the early 1990s the zambian government introduced the so called cash budget in which government domestic spending is limited to domestic revenue leaving no room for excess spending dinh adugna and myers review zambia s experience during the past decade focusing on the impact of the cash budget on poverty reduction they conclude that after some initial success in reducing hyperinflation the cash budget has largely failed to keep inflation at low levels created a false sense of fiscal security and distracted policymakers from addressing the fundamental issue of fiscal discipline more important it has had a deeply pernicious effect on the quality of service delivery to the poor features inherent to the cash budgeting system facilitated a substantial redirection of resources away from the intended targets such as agencies and ministries that provide social and economic services the cash budget also eliminated the predictability of cash releases making effective planning by line ministries difficult going forward zambia must adopt measures that over time will restore the commitment to budget discipline and shelter budget execution decisions from the pressures of purely short term exigencies this paper a product of the poverty reduction and economic management division 1 africa region is part of a larger effort in the region to review public expenditure management

Challenges in Health and Development 1970 differentiated book it has a historical context with research of the time women and economics by charlotte perkins gilman it is a book written by charlotte perkins gilman published in 1898 it is considered by some to be the best work of the writer and like others of her writings it examines the themes of the transformation of marriage family and home and its central argument is the economic independence and specialization of women as foundations for the improvement of marriage motherhood domestic industry and racial improvement the 1890s was a period of intense political debate and economic challenge where the feminist movement claimed the female vote among other reforms women found themselves joining the workforce in important ways seeking new opportunities and shaping new definitions of themselves it was at the end of this tumultuous decade that gilman s book emerged gilman argues primarily that women must change their cultural identities from the beginning he mentions that the human being is the only species where women depend on the male gender to survive women pay off this dependency through domestic or sexual services gilman argues that women work harder and longer than most men

A New Development Model and China's Future 1999 annotations this book is unique because it contains a literary criticism that was made by juan acevedo published for the first time in 1892 the yellow tapestry is written as the secret diary of a woman who weakened her love for marriage and motherhood is forced to a rest cure in the countryside to remedy her nervous condition which it was really just a postpartum depression although she wishes to write her husband and doctor forbids it prescribing instead complete passivity enclosed in her room the protagonist creates a reality of her own beyond the hypnotic drawing of the faded yellow tapestry a drawing that has come to symbolize her own seclusion narrated with superb psychological and dramatic precision the yellow tapestry stands out not only for the imaginative authenticity with which it paints the descent into the madness of a woman but also for the strength of its testimony to the importance that freedom and self empowerment have for the woman due to the nervous illness of the protagonist she and her husband have to leave for three months to a manor house in the middle of the field she knows in reality that her condition is not limited to a slight hysteria as everyone around her insists on emphasizing but she can do little about it except to hide a diary in which she attempts to express her feelings secluded in a room she hates always alone she begins to become obsessed with the design of the yellow wallpaper that paperes the walls and where she can see clearly that something wants to break free and get out the yellow tapestry recounted as a first person diary relates intimately digressively almost childishly the shocking story of a sick woman who is constantly denied her illness and who steals her autonomy in a sublime criticism of the medical system of the era and patriarchy which allowed discrimination and relativization of the health status of women the only protagonist is the narrator an anonymous woman of whom the reader only knows what she lets him know what he writes in his diary the rest of the characters her husband the sister of this one are nothing more than mere contextualization tools since what this story wants to express is enclosed within the psyche of the narrator entrance to the entrance the woman is telling more intimacies about her and her surroundings thus the reader comes to know that they have moved to that house because the woman has what her husband calls nervous breakdowns that her husband does not really

Gale Researcher Guide for: Charlotte Perkins Gilman's Feminist Realism 1995-03-01 robert rubin former united states secretary of the treasury and co chairman of goldman sachs distills the wisdom of a career spanning more than half a century in markets business government and politics to offer readers an astute and original guide for living and dealing with uncertainty in 1957 robert rubin took a class as a college sophomore and it changed his life the professor s name was raphael demos and the subject of the class was an introduction to philosophy but what professor demos was really teaching his students and what struck rubin so profoundly was how to think about thinking itself the realization that would stay with rubin for the rest of his life guiding him on a glittering career to the heights of both finance and politics was that there is no such thing as certainty uncertainty is everywhere and we must learn to live with it if we hope to succeed but what does this really entail at a time when decision makers in both government and business are faced with a series of worsening and often interlocking crises how can we make good decisions in the face of severe political turmoil a burgeoning and existential climate crisis and confronted with the lingering threat of global pandemic in other words how can we make good decisions when the stakes are desperately high in the yellow pad rubin sets out a number of methods and processes that have guided him through moments of high stakes crises sharing with the reader fascinating and thrilling stories from the halls of power in washington and on wall street he offers both qualitative and quantitative ways of sifting through difficult economic and social problems the sum of which is an enthralling and original intellectual framework that can be applied to both the most global universal problems as well as the more quotidian dilemmas we all face in our personal lives rubin speaks generously and with hard won wisdom across generations and the political divide engaging with the most contested and emotional issues of our times and seeking to propose realistic policy solutions to move society forward without leaving anyone behind

Pigment Handbook: Properties and economics 2014 it is very seldom that mere ordinary people like john and myself secure ancestral halls for the summer a colonial mansion a hereditary estate i would say a haunted house and reach the height of romantic felicity but that would be asking too much of fate still i will proudly declare that there is something queer about it else why should it be let so cheaply and why have stood so long untenanted john laughs at me of course but one expects that in marriage john is practical in the extreme he has no patience with faith an intense horror of superstition and he scoffs openly at any talk of things not to be felt and seen and put down in figures john is a physician and perhaps i would not say it to a living soul of course but this is dead paper and a great relief to my mind perhaps that is one reason i do not get well faster
