The Next Great Globalization 2009-10-08 many prominent critics regard the international financial system as the dark side of globalization threatening disadvantaged nations near and far but in the next great globalization eminent economist frederic mishkin argues the opposite that financial globalization today is essential for poor nations to become rich mishkin argues that an effectively managed financial globalization promises benefits on the scale of the hugely successful trade and information globalizations of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries this financial revolution can lift developing nations out of squalor and increase the wealth and stability of emerging and industrialized nations alike by presenting an unprecedented picture of the potential benefits of financial globalization and by showing in clear and hard headed terms how these gains can be realized mishkin provides a hopeful vision of the next phase of globalization mishkin draws on historical examples to caution that mismanagement of financial globalization often aided and abetted by rich elites can wreak havoc in developing countries but he uses these examples to demonstrate how better policies can help poor nations to open up their economies to the benefits of global investment according to mishkin the international community must provide incentives for developing countries to establish effective property rights banking regulations accounting practices and corporate governance the institutions necessary to attract and manage global investment and the west must be a partner in integrating the financial systems of rich and poor countries to the benefit of both the next great globalization makes the case that finance will be a driving force in the twenty first century economy and demonstrates how this force can and should be shaped to the benefit of all especially the disadvantaged nations most in need of growth and prosperity

Financial Globalization 2010 financial globalisation refers to the ongoing integration of once poorly connected national financial markets a key aspect of globalisation is a decline in financial home bias the tendency for domestic saving to be invested predominantly at home with domestic portfolios tilted heavily toward home country assets recent years have in fact seen a pronounced decline in home bias with a record fraction of global saving going to cross border investments indeed in 2005 and 2006 the share of global saving invested abroad climbed past 50 percent for the first time the trend toward greater cross border investment has been world wide with the united states other advanced economies and emerging economies all investing a markedly higher fraction of saving abroad significantly u s external investment as a share of saving has risen less dramatically than the share for other countries comparing the mid 1990s with the middle of the current decade we see that u s outflows as a share of domestic saving have risen by roughly 20 percentage points the increase abroad has been close to 35 percentage points as a result the united states now lags the rest of the world by a considerable margin in the share of national saving invested abroad it is instructive to consider the smaller scale of outflows from the united states in light of the current account balance of payments accounting identity described earlier in particular had outflows from the united states risen in line with the global trend the country would have required that much more inward investment to finance an unchanged sequence of current account deficits in turn more robust u s demand for foreign assets and the consequent need to attract additional inflows would have placed downward pressure on the dollar leading to at least somewhat smaller deficits this scenario illustrates a more general point developments that lead to shifts in gross capital flows have important feedback effects on net flows
