sets forth a national agenda with state and local implications for reducing medical errors and improving patient safety through the design of a safer health system this volume reveals the often startling statistics of medical error and the disparity between the incidence of error and public perception of it given many patients expectations that the medical profession always performs perfectly a careful examination is made of how the surrounding forces of legislation regulation and market activity influence the quality of care provided by health care organizations and then looks at their handling of medical mistakes using a detailed case study the book reviews the current understanding of why these mistakes happen a key theme is that legitimate liability concerns discourage reporting of errors which begs the question how can we learn from our mistakes balancing regulatory versus market based initiatives and public versus private efforts the institute of medicine presents wide ranging recommendations for improving patient safety in the areas of leadership improved data collection and analysis and development of effective systems at the level of direct patient care to err is human asserts that the problem is not bad people in health care it is that good people are working in bad systems that need to be made safer comprehensive and straightforward this book offers a clear prescription for raising the level of patient safety in american health care it also explains how patients themselves can influence the quality of care that they receive once they check into the hospital this book will be vitally important to federal state and local health policy makers and regulators health professional licensing officials hospital administrators medical educators and students health caregivers health journalists patient advocates as well as patients themselves first in a series of publications from the quality of health care in america a project initiated by the institute of medicine

Core Functions for the Human Resources Service System

writing high quality papers suitable for publication within international scientific journals is now an essential skill for all early career researchers their career progression and the reputation of the department in which they work depends upon it however many manuscripts are rejected or sent back for major re working not because the science they contain is in any way bad but because the same problems keep occurring in the way that the material is presented it is one thing to write a good scientific paper however it is quite another thing to get it published this requires some additional nous in writing this book don harris draws upon nearly a quarter of a century of experience as an author and reviewer of research papers and ultimately as a journal editor by his own admission it contains all the things he wished that his mentors had told him 25 years ago but didn't the material in the book is drawn from many years of finding all these things out for himself usually by trial and error but mostly error the text adopts a much lighter touch than is normally found in books of this type after all who really wants to read a book about writing research papers the author describes his own unique approach to writing journal papers which in his own words has proved to be extremely successful all major points are illustrated with examples from his own published works the book is written in the form of a manual for constructing a journal manuscript read a chapter write a section however the material it contains goes beyond just this and also describes how to select a target journal the manuscript submission process what referees are looking for in a good journal paper and how to deal with the referees comments each chapter concludes with a checklist to ensure all the key elements have been addressed
