how to invest money by george henry fety their inherent qualities have changed in no respect except that their prospect of appreciation in quoted price has become decidedly brighter their fall in price has been due to two factors one general and the other special first the absorption of liquid capital and consequent rise in interest rates occasioned by the unprecedented business activity of the country and second to the unfavorable technical position of the bonds due to an increased supply in the face of a decreased demand it will be seen that the question of maintaining the integrity of the money invested is a matter of great importance and deserves to rank as a fifth factor in determining the selection of investments altho it is not an inherent quality of each investment but is dependent for its effect upon general conditions if it is essential to the investor that his security should not shrink in quoted price his best investment is a real estate mortgage which is not quoted and consequently does not fluctate we are delighted to publish this classic book as part of our extensive classic library collection many of the books in our collection have been out of print for decades and therefore have not been accessible to the general public the aim of our publishing program is to facilitate rapid access to this vast reservoir of literature and our view is that this is a significant literary work which deserves to be brought back into print after many decades the contents of the vast majority of titles in the classic library have been scanned from the original works to ensure a high quality product each title has been meticulously hand curated by our staff our philosophy has been guided by a desire to provide the reader with a book that is as close as possible to ownership of the original work we hope that you will enjoy this wonderful classic work and that for you it becomes an enriching experience
