after a couple of years early retirement the author returned to work in his late 50s driving private hire cars as a chauffeur thus the driver becomes the listener and these are some of the stories of the customers in the back seat many of the customers are people who can no longer drive because of injury a lack of confidence infirmity or simply by being in a place where they do not wish to drive many of them also have a need to discuss important aspects of their lives with a listener as drivers we tend to witness anger hurt intolerance and other emotions apart from pure physical pain or the frustration of physical limitations we also get to hear about football grandchildren fishing and politics the accidental role of the driver as a listener is accentuated by the physical positioning within the vehicle there is little eye contact between the parties a physical separation within the same space exists yet an ability to establish a two way conversation also presents i had always thought that this was due to the insular nature of being in a vehicle and the non judgmental nature of a stranger listening friends or family members as listeners may have expectations or prejudicial information and experience and may not be as impartial i liked the idea that not being face to face and not having the normal eye contact feedback allows personal conversations to occur in a car more easily than if we were to meet a stranger at a coffee shop this makes me think that counsellors may be able to do better work in a car than within an office zen driving can make each driving experience enjoyable whether it s a daily hour long drive to work or a ten minute run to the local safeway you may well ask what is zen driving the japanese word zen literally means meditation and meditation means being fully aware fully in touch with your surroundings when you are in a meditative state you are in your natural self your buddha self and you can do it while driving but why zen driving the purpose of zen driving the book is to introduce you to your natural self which is what remains when you still your mind and ignore your chattering ego when you do this you gain confidence in your ability and finally you are that ability the frustrations of other drivers cutting you off or causing you to sit through two red lights because they re too timid to make a left turn on yellow will no longer make your blood pressure explode zen driving will teach you to look simply observe without qualification and then make your move zen driving is effortless spontaneous nondeliberate it is being one with the road and in turn driving becomes a pathway to consciousness an activity that clears the mind and soothes the soul something to take with you all those other times when you re not behind the wheel
