the tribal hidage attributed to the 7th century records the named groups and polities of early anglo saxon england and the taxation tribute due from their lands and surpluses whilst providing some indication of relative wealth and its distribution rather little can be deduced from the hidage concerning the underlying economic and social realities of the communities documented sue harrington and the late martin welch have adopted a new approach to these issues based on archaeological information from 12 000 burials and 28 000 objects of the period ad 450 650 the nature distribution and spatial relationships of settlement and burial evidence are examined over time against a background of the productive capabilities of the environment in which they are set the availability of raw materials evidence for metalworking and other industrial craft activities and communication and trade routes this has enabled the identification of central areas of wealth that influenced places around them key within this period was the influence of the franks who may have driven economic exploitation by building on the pre existing roman infrastructure of the south east frankish material culture was as widespread as that of the kentish people whose wealth is evident in many well furnished graves but more nuanced approaches to wealth distribution are apparent further to the west perhaps due to ongoing interaction with communities who maintained an essentially iromano british way of life the spread of agriculture did not happen uniformly but rather at different rates in different regions the essays in this volume celebrate the legacy of bernard wailes by highlighting the contribution of the european archaeological record to our understanding of the emergence of social complexity they provide case studies in how ancient europe can inform anthropological archaeology not only do they illuminate key research topics they also invite archaeologists working in other parts of the world to consider comparisons to ancient europe as they construct models for cultural development for their regions although there is a substantial corpus of literature on european prehistoric and medieval archaeology we do not know of a comparable volume that explicitly focuses on the contribution that the study of ancient europe can make to anthropological archaeology the ancient counties surrounding the weald in the se corner of england have a strongly marked character of their own that has survived remarkably well in the face of ever increasing population pressure the area is however comparatively neglected in discussion of roman britain where it is often subsumed into a generalised treatment of the civilian part of britannia that is based largely on other parts of the country this book aims to redress the balance the focus is particularly on kent surrey and sussex account is taken of information from neighbouring counties particularly when the difficult subsoils affect the availability of evidence an overview of the environment and a consideration of themes relevant to the south east as a whole accompany 14 papers covering the topics of rural settlement in each county crops querns and millstones animal exploitation salt production leatherworking the working of bone and similar materials the production of iron and iron objects non ferrous metalworking pottery production and the supply of tile to roman london agriculture and industry provides an up to date assessment of our knowledge of the southern hinterland of roman london and an area that was particularly open to influences from the continent
